MEDC Celebrates 20th Anniversary

McKinney City Officials and Business Leaders Gather for Festivities

McKinney Economic Development Corporation celebrated its 20th anniversary by holding a special reception on the evening of December 12 at a beautiful indoor airplane hanger in the McKinney National Airport. City officials and business leaders were invited to join together to celebrate this meaningful day, filled with the joyful Christmas atmosphere.

Mayor Brian Loughmiller, City Manager Jason Gray, MEDC Chairman Ernest Lynch and President and Chief Executive Officer Jim Wehmeier were on stage to express their gratitude to all attendees for choosing McKinney as a place to do business. "They are important pillars of the city's economy, creating jobs and sources of revenue for the city. For many years, the City of McKinney has been selected as one of the most livable cities in the United States." Mayor Loughmiller said.

McKinney's rapidly growing population, from 25,000 people 20 years ago to more than 140,000 now, is the result of the city government and the business community working together to create a mutually beneficial relationship for all. In recent years, the city even put out more efforts to promote international business and actively recruit foreign investors to invest and to set up offices, distribution centers or manufacturing facilities to stimulate further economic development.

VIPs attending the event included executives from several Taiwan-headquartered enterprises. Wistron GreenTech Texas Co., the North America subsidiary of parent company Wistron Group, which is a Fortune 500 enterprise, had several executives attending the event. The company bought 22 acres of land in McKinney to set up its North America headquarters and is expected to start operations in February of 2014, which will bring more than one hundred jobs to the city.
