20-0110 Update on New Code McKinney Initiative (Development Regulations Update)

Planning Director Jennifer Arnold and consultants Matt Goebel and Tareq Wafaie provided an update of the New Code McKinney initiative, which includes an assessment of the existing development regulations and broad recommendations for creating an updated development code. City staff and the consultant team hosted numerous internal and external meetings, interviews, and discussions over several months with City Council, PZ, and citywide and statewide staff and members of the development community, related to the existing development regulations in McKinney. An online survey was also used to allow an open forum for providing feedback and to expand the reach of discussion.

Based on the feedback received and a technical assessment of the existing development regulations, the project team drafted a Code Assessment Report and broad recommendations for improving McKinney's development code.

Following the work session discussion, the project team will begin work on the revised development code, which will be carried out in three main components: (1) administration and procedures, (2) zoning districts and uses, and (3) development/design standards. Each component will be presented to the Council, PZ, and the public, prior to drafting a completely consolidated development code document.
