Construction and Alterations to the property:

- The Sarah Battle House, constructed around 1877, was moved from its original location on the lot, facing West Louisiana Street, to its current location, facing South College Street, in 1894.
- The house is constructed in the Neo-Colonial Style.
- Historic alterations to the home include the initial move, an extension of the north end of the home around the same time, and enclosure of the north porch in 1915.
- Non-historic, but compatible alterations include a 20-foot extension of the kitchen wing of the home toward the east in 1980 and addition of two bathrooms.

History of the home and people associated with the property:

- Sarah Battle, in her own name, purchased a two-acre lot in August of 1874. Three years later she built this residence.
- Sarah sold Edward W. Morten, Jr. the home in 1894 for $2,000 cash plus a $1,500 note. Mr. Morten was a co-owner of the McKinney Ice and Coal Company. Soon after purchasing the property, Mr. Morten moved the old house that Sarah had built to its current location at the southwest corner of the two-acre tract.
- In 1900, Edward Morten sold the property to his business partner, Louis A Scott, who was responsible for the sumptuous Queen-Anne Style home at the corner of College and Louisiana immediately to the north of this property.

- Louis Scott then sold a one-third-acre portion of the property which included the Sarah Battle House to insurance agent Joseph A. Garrison sometime between 1902 and 1910. This sale created the present lot size.
- Garrison sold the property to Thomas A. Coleman on May 11, 1912. The Colemans lived on the property for a brief six years before selling the property to Mrs. John Allen in 1918.
- The Huffman-Allen family were long-time owners of the property from 1918-1975. Notable members of the family include Ruth Huffman Baines, wife of McKinney real estate dealer Joseph W. Baines. Baines purchased The McKinney Advocate in 1878 and became Secretary of State in 1882. They were the grandparents of Lyndon B. Johnson, 36th President of the United States.
