August 15, 2016

- MONEY MAGAZINE 2014 -

Background

- In June of 2016, the City Council expressed an interest in partnering with developers, restauranteurs or restaurant development groups to expand McKinney's dining options. This initiative has been commonly referred to as "restaurant row."
- At the July 18, 2016 work session, the City Council provided more information regarding sites that might be appropriate for a restaurant row and general parameters for a restaurant row definition.
- The goal of tonight's discussion is:
 1. To gain consensus regarding a definition of a restaurant row
 2. To gain consensus for target locations
 2. To lay out a clear process forward with tentative timeframes
 3. To consider the creation of a City Council subcommittee

Restaurant Row Definition

- Based on feedback received to date, Staff's working definition of a restaurant row is:

“A collection of three or more fine dining, casual dining, and/or fast casual restaurants within a larger coordinated development. Fast food, drive-in, or drive-through restaurants would not be included in this meaning. Examples of a “restaurant row” could include a collection of restaurants that are developed in coordination with one another which are comparable in scale, character and quality to restaurants including, but not limited to The Cheesecake Factory, P.F. Chang’s, Brio, Outback Steakhouse, Uncle Julio’s, Houston’s, Carrabba’s Italian Grill, Kona Grill, Eatzi’s, Sambuca, Mi Cocina, and Taco Diner. A “restaurant row” could include a lifestyle center destination similar to Addison Circle in Addison, TX; Legacy Town Center in Plano, TX; or Waters Creek in Allen, TX.”
